THURSDAY EVENING, MARCH 1.

Division Run Mad.

We are in favor of a division of the diocese of Virginia, because we think the present diocese too large to be advantageously superintended by one man. But it is manifest from G what is going on there is a tendency to divide and subdivide, which will end in a radical 1 change of the position and principles of our |

Here, for example, is the diocese of Iowa, with about forty clergymen; and the "sense" of the Southern Convocation is that it be divided into three dioceses. If this be "sense" we would be glad to know what folly is. Then C we have our old friend, John Henry Hopkins, Gordonsville 7 55 S.T.D., lecturing last week in Baltimore, advocating the reduction of dioceses to twenty or thirty miles square. Why he did not go on and advocate twenty or thirty square miles we 245 a. m., and make connection at Danville to hardly know. If nothing is to be considered but miles in the formation of a diocese, then the day is coming when there will be some ten or twenty thousand bishops in the United States. Every elergyman will be a bishop, and doubtless we shall fill up remidly 14. hardly know. If nothing is to be considered become an institution. The church body should be constituted somewhat similarly to an army. The dieceses of each State should be formed into one provincial diocese, which would meet in general convention triennially, or at any other periods designated. The idea of conforming a provincial diocese to the extent of a State was perfectly consonant to American forms of government, and was first conceived and advocated by the late Rev. Dr. Mahan, who was pastor of St. Paul's church."

The great purpose of a bishop is to have a diocese he can "oversee," which cannot be done to advantage unless he visit the various parishes, and can remain long enough to see it, to ascertain something about it. Hence not the number of its square miles is to be considered so much as its population, its number of parishes, its clergymen and its members. Square miles, with railroads almost obliterating distance, is but a small element; the other matter of population and parishes is the great

The General Convention should certainly be awakened to the importance of the move that is going on; and if the Lower House is not conservative enough to prevent our Church from being thus radically changed, then the bishops must prevent what we deem to be an evil of great magnitude. To have a small army, with as many generals as captains, is not the way to succeed. To have five hundred or five thousand small gentlemen to overlook and guide, the Church is neither to our taste nor according to our judgment.-So. Ch.
